Subject: Optus Hybrid Fibre Coaxial (HFC) Network Safety Hazard

Key Messages

Optus has advised a potential safety hazard has recently been identified as part of routine maintenance on the HFC Network. The hazard consists of corrosion to the HFC strand wire and is contained to within 150m of some coastal areas of Sydney.

Description of incident or hazard:

The Optus Hybrid Fibre Coaxial (HFC) network, which includes the strand supporting that network, is mounted on power poles which also support power lines and possibly other telecommunication cables.

Optus has advised Ausgrid, that a potential safety hazard has recently been identified as part of routine maintenance on the HFC network. This hazard consists of corrosion to the HFC strand wire and is contained to within 150m of the coastal areas of Sydney the areas as outline in attachment 1 – Optus HFC Remediation Areas.

Extent of impact:

Ausgrid has been advised, that Optus has completed an assessment of all potentially impacted areas and rectification works are under way to address the areas subject to corrosion. For safety reasons, Optus does not consent to any weight being placed on any part of the strand or cable which forms part of the Optus HFC network by a third party without its prior written consent.

Immediate action taken (or to be taken) to eliminate or control the risk:

In accordance with past instructions, Optus does not expect that any third parties or their workers are currently putting any weight on any part of the strand or cable, however, Optus wanted to bring this to your attention to ensure the safety of all business associates and their contractors who may work within proximity of its HFC network. This includes asset owners, the Energy Supply Authority/Utility, Foxtel and other telecommunications carriers (third parties)
